FIREBALL—Photo of the fireball from hydrogen bomb test was made approximately 50 miles northwest of the target over Bikini Atoll. The Atomic Energy Commission said it shows the hydrogen bomb's burning. Atomic officials said that the bomb lived up to its advance billing as a radio-actively "sustained" weapon.

PLAN TO MARRY—This meeting of Miss Genevieve de Gallard, Parisian, "Angel of Blue Room Tea," and French paratrooper Capt. Jean de Hennes de Hennes, culminated in romance. This couple plan to marry in June in the old military church of Saint Louis des Invalides in Paris.

FIVE-YEAR-OLD JOHNNY LEWIS, incurably ill with leukemia in Los Angeles Children's Hospital, administers his new friend, a pain reliever. It apparently flew through the open windows of Johnny's hospital room after his mother and father had to deny his request for a painkiller because of hospital regulations forbidding it. Authorities at the hospital decided to let Johnny keep his new friend.

POINT OF VIEW—Carla Bushmore, three, doesn't enjoy being on top of the world. She's resting on Arctic section of huge globe aboard the Independence, docked at New York City. The Salt Lake City youngster and her mother returned to this country aboard the ship after visiting daddy, Captain Clark C. Bushmore, stationed in Italy.

SAILORS GO "DOWNSTAIRS"—They do, if they're assigned to the Narvik. Uncle Henry's first submarine powered by atomic fuel, but the term is appropriate when applied to the one-day strategy training from coming tower to diving control compartment.

623,000 Farms

to be visited

Beginning on June 1 this year a census enumerator will visit each of the 623,000 farms in Canada to obtain answers to a series of questions on the farms. The last census of agriculture for all Canada was taken in 1951 and for the Prairie Provinces since 1949.

Many farmers will therefore have to answer questions on the agriculture of their farms, but for some it will be the first experience.

The schedule for 1956 has been worked out about a year in advance. The number of questions is 181. Most of the questions are straightforward, such as acres devoted to crops, numbers of livestock on farms, and inventories of equipment.

Farms will require assistance by the farmer if no records are kept. Such questions are production and number of bulls and eggs during the month of May, expenditures for feed, wages and cash for the year, and estimates of the value of corn and hauled forage during the winter and the dollar value of share rent for the year 1955.

The census enumerator is duty bound to obtain a report about every farm in Canada, and every farmer is asked to co-operate. The enumerator is prepared to give him an accurate statement as to the results. Enumerators are pledged to keep the information given them confidential, as are also all employees of the Bureau of Statistics.

The law provides penalties for any violation of this pledge. Furthermore, the Bureau of Statistics does not divulge the business of an individual to any government department nor to anyone outside the government. Every farmer may feel that the information he furnishes him gives about his farm will not become known to any person except those who handle the census, and the information will be used only to assist the government in its statistical estimates.

Record forage acreage seen for Saskatchewan

REGINA—R. R. McKenna, director of the plant industry branch of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture, said yesterday that forage acreage in the province has reached a record for the year.

Records for grain and seed in the department's spring planting forage acreage program are running well ahead of last year. 75 days ago there had been 4,000 acres of forage planted in the province, compared with 3,500 acres in 1955.

Reasons for the steadily growing interest and acceptance of forage crops as a vital part of most farms are many, he said. One of the main reasons at the moment would appear to be the severe drought in some places last year, which winter just past. It was so drying in fact, he added, that many had more farmers are using forage plants as a soil preserver and improver with less need for fertilizer. This can be in the future, because there are few farms in the province which do not have very good use of forage crops in some form.

McKenna said additional efforts for seed and winter forage program should be placed in the near future through the local Agricultural Representative, municipal officers or by writing direct to the Plant Industry Branch, Department of Agriculture, Regina.

Potato quality

No report of potato production has received more comment in recent years than that of quality. Mr. R. H. McKenna, director of the Plant Industry Branch of the Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture, said yesterday that the quality of the potato crop is of great importance to the farmer. The quality of the potato crop is of great importance to the farmer. The quality of the potato crop is of great importance to the farmer.

A lot in which the potato crop and organic matter content has been built up and maintained through crop rotations will contain more organic matter than a crop which has been built up and maintained through heavy applications of synthetic fertilizers. The organic matter content of the soil is of great importance to the farmer. The organic matter content of the soil is of great importance to the farmer.

Most potato soils are deficient in potassium and the cheapest and most effective way of supplying potassium is through the use of potassium fertilizers. The potassium content of the soil is of great importance to the farmer. The potassium content of the soil is of great importance to the farmer.

The problem of growing high quality potatoes is complex. The variety to grow, the maturity of the crop at harvest time, methods of handling and storage requirements are but a few of the additional factors affecting quality. Nevertheless, experience indicates that the most important factors are good soil management and proper fertilization of the crop. To accomplish this the potato grower must, consider the use of a crop rotation suitable for his district and having fertilization practices, crop requirements, time of application, and analysis

Where to lay your "ace"

One of the biggest trials in tennis is "nailing" your opponent with a well-placed serve. The average player gives himself away by the way he goes for the angle, trying to hit the ball away from his opponent, not toward the solution. This is a mistake, because the ball is higher at the side than it is down the center and this makes it more difficult to get a hard hit. The smart player goes for the side, not the center. He knows that the ball is higher at the side than it is down the center. He knows that the ball is higher at the side than it is down the center.

Remember this, and put the ball on your side next time you go after your ace.

Learn to "run tall" Many runners, particularly sprinters, have a tendency to exaggerate their forward lean, especially when trying to run fast. It has been a fairly widespread opinion ever the past few years that a fair amount of lean is necessary for fast, easy running. Actually, the reverse often is true.

The much less lean crump the athlete's legs so that he does not get some running underneath him. He is also out of balance and he will tend to struggle when he runs.

To run properly, the athlete should try to keep a fairly natural leaning posture, with the chest high, stomach in and neck, arms and legs straight. The body should be just a little in front of the hips, but the emphasis should be on "standing" rather than leaning forward.

This applies to all sports—baseball, soccer, football and basketball as well as to running.

How to throw straight Some baseball experts claim that throwing in 75 degrees is the game. Whether or not this is true, an accurate throwing arm is a "must" for every ballplayer.

Here's one way to make sure the ball is thrown straight. Concentrate on keeping your fingers directly below the ball as it leaves your hand. If they slip off the side, the ball may drop. Soft, false or even "butterfly" motion makes it difficult for the receiver to tell your throw.

Check your throwing habits, and make sure you are following through on every ball you throw. These rules may prevent drowning

His rules which, if unswayed, only help to prevent drowning. One rule is that if you are in the water, don't swim if you are panting, tired or overcast.

It is during, "low water" you may. The bottom can be a deceptive factor when it is actually dry.

3. Follow along on pool reefs and other signposts. Never swim alone. Children should be watched closely.

4. Ocean swimming can be particularly treacherous. Waves and undertows are unpredictable and should be kept in mind.

5. Leave marlin gaffs in the water. Remember, it is at least as far back to the beach as it is away from it.

6. If your boat overturns, stay in it if you are far from shore. You can remain as long as the boat does.

Temperatures in the Atlantic range 40 degrees colder than those in the Arctic.

WEEKLY BIBLE COMMENT

JOHN IS THE APOSTLE OF LOVE

John is the greatest apostle of Christian love. It is because of his love that he is the apostle of love.

In his letter, John makes it plain that he is not to be a worldly man, but to be a man of love. He is not to be a man of love, but to be a man of love.

John says that he has knowledge of love because Christ has loved him for all time. John makes it plain that he is not to be a worldly man, but to be a man of love.

Three Dimensional Mirror A British engineering firm, the British Electric Mirror Co., has taken out a patent for a mirror which is said to give a reflection for the first time. The mirror is said to be a three-dimensional mirror, set at angles to each other, it gives back the image of the mirror, not the usual reversed one.

A printed page laid flat in front of the mirror can be read normally. The image of the page is said to be a three-dimensional mirror, set at angles to each other, it gives back the image of the mirror, not the usual reversed one.
